

For back-to-school health... Nutritious meals make the grade.

A healthy body means a healthy mind. Kids who eat right tend to concentrate better and are more successful in school. So whether they're in the cafeteria at school or the kitchen at home, be sure your children fill half their plate with fruits and veggies at every meal.

BREAKFAST

Breakfast gives kids energy in the morning, helping them learn and focus more during school. Preparing a tasty, nutritious breakfast is as easy as topping some instant oatmeal with nuts or raisins, or spreading peanut butter on a piece of whole-grain toast.

LUNCH

Whether it's hot lunch or cold lunch, every meal should be built with nutrition in mind. Make a wrap or sandwich with fiber-rich whole grains and lean sources of protein. Include fresh or canned fruits and veggies, and choose low-fat dairy products like yogurt and cheese, too.

DINNER

When it's dinnertime, let your kids pitch in in the kitchen. They'll be more interested in eating something they were involved in preparing. Plus, they'll gain important nutritional knowledge in the process.

Preparing healthy meals? It's elementary.
